In systems engineering and requirements engineering, a non-functional requirement (NFR) is a requirement that specifies criteria that can be used to judge the operation of a system, rather than specific behaviors. They are contrasted with functional requirements that define specific behavior or functions. The plan for implementing functional requirements is detailed in the system design.

One of the most widely used assessments of domain-general creative cognition is the alternate uses divergent thinking task. In contrast to convergent thinking tasks, which involve discovering a single solution to a creative problem (e.g., insight 6, 7), divergent thinking involves generating several possible solutions to an open-ended problem, such as inventing creative uses for common objects.
